Dr. Tracey Bell-Jemigan

Assistant Professor

Dr. Tracey Bell-Jemigan is a called a true educator. She has taught in various public school systems for eleven years ranging from the Mississippi Delta to parts of Tennessee. She has taught elementary grades, high school, and currently teaches at Jackson State University as an Assistant Professor. Dr. Bell-Jemigan is originally from Glen Allan, MS where she was reared by her parents, Barbara and Donnie Bell, with two older brothers and one older sister.

Dr. Bell-Jemigan believes in providing a quality education for all students regardless of their background, socioeconomic status, and/or intellectual abilities. She established these beliefs by the wisdom imparted in her by her late Grandmother and family members who were not fortunate enough to extend their educational pursuits beyond middle/high school. This very reason motivated her to enter the teaching profession. “I quickly understood that being an educator was more than just a profession for me; it was/is a calling,” Bell-Jemigan said.

After four years of undergraduate studies, she graduated from Mississippi Valley State University and later with a Masters in Education and Doctorate of Education degree from The University of Mississippi. Dr. Bell-Jemigan enjoys spending time with her husband, family, and friends, cooking, completing creative projects, and traveling. She is a member of Jackson Revival Center Church where she serves on the Theater and Media Ministries.
